SAAB Announces New RCCA Gen 3 Vehicle Scott Heckenrich Airweld News February 11th, 2015 For several decades SAAB has been one of the most significant driving forces behind the transformation of the automotive industry. Their design, engineering and production is recognized as innovative, market focused, and continuously improving. Established in 1946, Sweden's Saab Automobile AB is one of the world's oldest and most prestigious auto producers. Saab began in 1939 with a manufacturing facility in Trollhattan, Sweden, but the company made its way from its early roots developing small-scale commercial vehicles to where it is today: one of the leading suppliers of cars, motorbikes, trucks, and buses worldwide. It's no wonder that Saab has a host of titles, including Champion of Design, Design Industries of the Year, and more. Born in 2011, the 9-3 is an entry level Saab sports car. There's no traction control, no traction mode, no four-wheel ABS, no stability control. It's all but a dedicated race car, and it is road legal. It's a true Saab in the truest sense of the word. The 9-3 makes use of a variant of the Twin-Turbocharged 2.0L four-cylinder DOHC Direct Injection engine, which is found in the 9-5, 9-2X, and A9Ls. Rated at 245 hp and 258 lb-ft of torque, the 9-3 should provide a fun, engaging drive. The low-slung body gives the 9-3 a race car look and feel. There are a few cool touches, like the sharp shoulder line in the front, a fat rear diffuser, and 24-spoke low-profile alloy wheels. The nine-speed automatic transmission features steering wheel-mounted paddles that control gear selection and can be used as clutch. Saab's design teams works to not only create a more stylish car, but one that is easier to live with. For example, the steering wheel is larger to match the increased driver reach, the seats are wider, the pedals are shorter and lower than the competition, and the transmission knob provides a distinct shape and feel. Vehicles like the 9-3, and Saab's other new models in the RCCA
