Note: For information about how to create layers that combine two images, see Chapter 8. For information about using Photoshop's Lasso tool to select multiple images, see Chapter 6. Creating an Image in Photoshop The most commonly used way to create an image in Photoshop is to start with a blank image. The File menu has a Create a New Image command. At the bottom of the menu you can select from various preset templates that have different size options from which to choose. If you select Large, you can choose to also insert a background image from a folder on your computer. The resulting file is a TIFF image, which is a standard image format. One of the most useful things to know about TIFF files is that you can merge them. TIFFs are layered and each layer can have image files merged into it to create what is called a smart object. So if you save a TIFF file as a smart object, you can merge it with one image into another image and it will appear as a single layered composite. When you save a TIFF file in Photoshop as a smart object, make sure that the smart object option is checked. When you export a TIFF file from Photoshop as a Photoshop PSD file, you can open the file in Photoshop, turn off the smart object option, and merge the layer with another image. * * * # When you save a TIFF file as a smart object, the number of layers is defined as the number of layers that you merge into each other. There is a limit of 32 layers. This means that you can have up to 32 layers of images merged into each other in one file that you can edit in Photoshop. Photoshop CS3 allows you to merge 25 layers of images into one Photoshop file. * * * To create a new TIFF file in Photoshop, choose File→New, or press Ctrl+N on the keyboard. This opens a dialog box that has a variety of preset templates from which to choose. Choose from a color setting or blank (white) for the background. If you want to save the resulting TIFF file in a folder on your computer, select the Folder option at the bottom of the dialog box (see Figure 1-1). Select a location for the file on your computer's hard drive and click OK. **Figure 1-1:** The File menu has a New Image command that opens a dialog box with several preset templates. In

Pervomaysky District Pervomaysky District () is an administrative and municipal district (raion), one of the twenty-five in Pskov Oblast, Russia. It is located in the west of the oblast and borders with Pustoshkinsky District in the north, Tulunsky District in the northeast, Kimrsky District in the southeast, Bezhanitsky District in the south, Novorzhevsky District in the southwest, and with Yekaterinovsky District in the northwest. The area of the district is. Its administrative center is the town of Pervomaysk. Population: 20,311 (2002 Census); The population of Pervomaysk accounts for 50.1% of the district's total population. Geography The district is elongated from north to south and is up to wide. The rivers Tarnya and Opukha run through the district. History The area was originally populated by the Slavs and then conquered by the ancient Novgorod Republic. The area now lies within the territory of the former Kingdom of Novgorod. In 1135, the territory was divided into 3 parts and given to the Novgorod princes. In 1275, Pervomaysk became the center of a newly established principality. The principality was divided into 2 parts in the 13th century and remained in Pervomaysky namestnichestvo until the dissolution of the principality. Pervomaysky principality was one of the 12 parishes of the Novgorod Lands. In 1407, during the reign of Vasily I of Moscow, Pervomaysky was granted to Ivan the Good. The principality was the birthplace of Alexander Nevsky, the patron saint of Russia. The town was destroyed by the army of the Teutonic Knights in 1240, and remained deserted until the 17th century. In 1614, after the fall of Vasily I of Moscow, Pervomaysky became the domain of Bohuslav III of the Czech Lands. In the Treaty of Pereyasavl of 1617, the area was permanently ceded by Russia to the Swedish Empire. After the treaty, the town was burned down by the Swedish forces and never rebuilt. In the course of the administrative reform carried out in 1708 by Peter the Great, the area was

The code I have is: var command = Database.SqlQuery("select * from Something where something").ToList(); var result = command.Execute(new ExecuteOptions() { ExecuteType = ExecuteType.SingleResult }).ToList(); However result is always empty. I've verified that result has the correct number of elements (3 in this case), but no data. Any ideas? A: Your ExecuteOptions does not contain enough informations. This one should be fine : var command = Database.SqlQuery("select * from Something where something").ToList(); var result = command.Execute(new ExecuteOptions { ExecuteType = ExecuteType.SingleResult, Parameters = new[] { "@id" } }).ToList();
