"Turn off in case of a virus attack." The hypothesis behind this concept is that if there is an active virus attack on the computer, the firewalls might go down. Your computer will not let the virus succeed in getting into your operating system. When you do not want to have your computer shut down, you can turn on the Auto Shutdown option, which is also managed with the Auto Shutdown Control Panel. With the exception of the Auto Shutdown option, the program is fully automated. Therefore, if there is a virus attack, a message pops up and asks you to open the program or shut down your computer. If you do not shut down the computer, the program shuts down automatically at a predefined time of your choice. Port Magic comes with a set of built-in scan rules that allow you to protect your computer against new and known virus attacks. The free version of the program allows you to protect up to three computers from receiving viruses. However, you can upgrade to the premium version, which comes with the possibility of protecting up to ten computers at a time. Port Magic comes with a built-in help feature, but you can also get help by scanning the program's help file for errors. Here are some key features of "Port Magic": ⬜ Persistantly monitor to detect these probes ⬜ Track the address of the perpetrator & time of probe ⬜ Confuse the prober with "fake" ports Port Magic's interface is based on buttons that bring up small windows and a box labeled "Port Magic" at the top right side of the screen. The green circle represents the computer, and each filled circle represents a computer protected by Port Magic. When a new port is scanned, it is marked with a red circle. When a new detected port is not one of the built-in scan rules, a small window will appear with the source of the probe on the left side of the screen. When a port is found to be a false alarm, the window will disappear. When there is an active virus attack on the computer, a box is popped up on the screen with the source of the probe on the left side, and the time when the attack started is written on the box. There is no need for manual correction in Port Magic, since they are automatically removed if the probe attempts to attack another computer. Recommendation: Port Magic is small program in the Windows category. It works

What's New In Auto Shutdown?

With this cool and useful application, you can automatically close all your open programs just by one click. Auto Shut Down Explained: When your system starts to run out of memory, applications will stop responding, and will eventually close or crash (at this moment). But what if you don't notice and forget to shut them down when you leave your office? Not so much. In this situation, you have to wait for the process to terminate, and the applications remain running until that moment. And then you are forced to wait some more time until you can start up your computer. But thanks to this amazing solution, you can solve this problem easily and effectively. You have to use the Shut Down Windows 7 Automatically option, which has been activated in the taskbar. When you click this button, it will close all your open applications and immediately shut down your PC. You can also control the time interval at which it will shut down. As soon as you have entered your password and are getting ready to leave the office, the system will turn off automatically. This feature is very interesting and useful, and you should definitely try it. Imagine a world where you can store virtually everything on a USB stick, thanks to USB Flash drives, who are becoming so cheap and mainstream that we barely think of them anymore. SanDisk has taken advantage of these trends with the introduction of the 128 GB SSD USB Flash Drive. The new product is not only more affordable than the 64 GB version, but also compatible with Windows XP and newer operating systems, which also means it can be powered by either USB port. Here is more information from SanDisk on how the new Flash drive works, as well as a video promo: SAN FRANCISCO, May 9, 2010 – SanDisk® Corporation (NASDAQ: SNDK), a global leader in flash storage solutions, today introduced the SanDisk® FlashAir™ 128 GB SSD (Solid State Drive) USB Flash Drive. With a flash storage capacity of 128 GB, the FlashAir™ 128 GB SSD features performance characteristics that are faster than that of a high performance hard drive. The FlashAir™ 128 GB SSD is the world's first premium solid state drive that supports USB mass storage class. FlashAir™ 128 GB SSD has exceeded the current user experience standard for USB mass storage class devices, meaning that the FlashAir™ 128 GB SSD will not only be compatible with any modern operating system, but also eliminates the need to install additional software to work with Windows®
