It is a pity that we cannot talk about this game at all. Then the game would actually be enjoyable. However, because we are talking about a game that is made by the same company, a game that is basically the same, and a game that basically means "pure action RPG," the talk of us talking about this game is a bit of a shame. However, the most important thing is that we are talking about the game as well as the company, because we want them to know that the game was not a fail as much as it is a try. This should not be like a matter of business. This is a game that does not make a difference between us and them, and is about someone being "forced" to do something instead of someone doing the "forced thing." The entire purpose of someone forced to do something is to make the situation more interesting. The reason why someone loses something while finding something, is not because that person does nothing. However, one thing I have a bit of interest in talking about this time is the actions that need to be done before the game actually starts. This is the kind of matter that may make you change your mind before the game even starts. If the story is made to tell the basis of the game's gameplay, the story is made to be played in a certain way. However, there is only one story that I can't help it but to be interested in. A little time ago, I was a player that did not play random character creation. The reason I did not play random character creation is that I had a character created through the random character creation that I wanted to play. However, my characters were very good-looking, but players that I talked to told me that their character were really unattractive, so I was able to understand what my characters were made of by what other people said. The process was very similar to this. When I was playing in free servers, I was able to have a good conversation with other players, and I was able to know what kind of player they were. I was able to understand what their characters were made of. When I, for example, played a female player, I would understand what my characters were made of without problems. On the contrary, when I played a male player, some players would call me a “woman” or a  bff6bb2d33
