The data needs to be filtered on both columns a and b. The first sheet will be a master and the second sheet will be a detail file. The second sheet will have about 100 rows and an extra column "c". I need to make a button that, when clicked, filters the master sheet according to the first column from the second sheet. As you can see the second sheet has some unique identifiers for the rows. I need to check that identifier is found in the master. If the identifier is found, the corresponding data will be retrieved from the master and put in the second sheet. I tried several functions. Excel.Search and Excel.Match. Both of them are not filtering properly as they don't check both columns. For instance, I have a sheet with two columns. Column A contains a unique identifier. Column B contains a list of data. I need to match the identifier from sheet1 with the identifier in sheet2 and retrieve the corresponding data in sheet2. A: The trick is to first make the data in the second sheet have a unique identifier. You can use a cell address, or a chart in the correct location. Then use the following to compare the data in the master sheet. You can perform a search or an exact match. You can filter on both columns

Option Explicit Public Sub Compare()
Dim iCell As Range
Set iCell = ActiveSheet.Range("A1:A1000")
iCell.AutoFilter Field:=1, Criteria1:="=*" & Sheets("Sheet2").Range("C1").Value
End Sub

Q: $.map() to dynamically determine if an element should be included in an array I'm trying to use `$.map()` to create an array by looping through a set of elements. Each element will be included in the array if it matches a set of criteria. e79caf774b
