My brother has a super old flip phone that is an international version of an Apple phone. In fact, that description is in the back of the phone itself, but not in any obvious spot: I can't even read it, but I'm sure it's not the phone I want to steal :) Anybody ever seen that font? A: It is Toki Pona, a constructed language that was very popular during the internet age. Its creator says, "Originally, [it was] designed as a test language to see if non-natives of the language could read it and understand it," so it could be as simple as 'Japanese' written in 'Punjab'. Also check out some of the wikipedia articles on it. It is a real language, but only discovered really by anyone outside Japan a little under 10 years ago. It is sort of like backwards English, with minor grammatical problems c6a93da74d
