At the present time, the surgical approach to rectal cancer depends on the extent of the tumor as determined by the surgeon's clinical judgment and the decision whether the patient will need adjuvant therapy. Local excision is the appropriate option for lesions 1.5 cm or less from the dentate line. Low anterior resections or abdomino-perineal resections are required if tumors are more than 1.5 cm from the dentate line. Postoperative radiotherapy is the standard treatment for patients who have positive lymph nodes. Adjuvant chemotherapy and preoperative chemoradiation therapy are in the development phase. This review discusses the treatment of rectal cancer in its different aspects.Strengths and difficulties questionnaire, anthropometry and age estimation among aboriginal children in Northern Québec, Canada. The objective of this study was to describe the development and growth of Aboriginal children aged 0 to 16 years in terms of the child's strengths and difficulties using the Strengths and Difficulties Questionnaire (SDQ) and compare these observations to data on the same variables obtained from French-Canadian children in the same age group. Data were collected in five small regional centers in Northern Québec in 2014. The sample consisted of 1541 Aboriginal children and their parents and the French-Canadian children, their parents and their teachers. Concerning parental perspective, the mean total SDQ scores for the Aboriginal children (overall n = 1457) was 6.94 (± 3.12). This was higher than the norm scores for the French-Canadian children (over c6a93da74d
