1. Field of the Invention
The present invention relates to a method for transferring data stored in a memory and a computer using the method. More particularly, the present invention relates to a method for transferring data stored in a memory, in which a master memory and a slave memory are synchronously transferred, a master memory and a slave memory are synchronously transferred, and a master memory and a slave memory are selectively, simultaneously or separately transferred, and a computer using the method.

2. Description of the Related Art
Recently, the need for instant and high-speed access to data increases to satisfy the requirements of users. In response, the need for a magnetic storage apparatus having increased data storage capacity and high speed data access capability has risen. Thus, the large-capacity magnetic storage apparatus has been provided with a high-speed interface. However, there are limits to the improvement of a low-cost, high-speed interface of a low-capacity magnetic storage apparatus. For this reason, a magnetic storage apparatus having increased data storage capacity at a low cost has been provided. To achieve this, the magnetic storage apparatus employs a non-volatile memory device having a high-speed interface and increased storage capacity. In order to implement a magnetic storage apparatus having increased data storage capacity at a low cost, it is required to reduce the manufacture cost of the non-volatile memory device. In general, a non-volatile memory device has a multi-layered structure. The non-volatile memory device comprises a plurality of cells and a plurality of control circuits for controlling the operation of the cells. Here, the plurality of cells are respectively provided in memory planes of a plurality of layers of the non-volatile memory device. Each of the memory planes is a layer for storing data
